

Dear all,

Please find the revised and all other company policies for your reference and records. The changes have been made to the parental leave and air fare policy at this time.

The purpose of this email is also to send a refresher and seek support of our team members so we can achieve 100% adherence to Jacky's company policies. As Jacky's group takes discipline very seriously which also reflects in their actions such as timely payment of salaries, leave salary, air passage, final settlement etc. and provide benefits on time such as medical insurance, life insurance and Diwali gifts to all team members equally regardless of their designation, performance and number of years spent in the company. Therefore, it's only fair that we as a team return that gratitude by following company policies which are set by Jacky's management at the group level. This clearly means that all group policies are for the entire group employees, and no team member is excluded or exempted from it unless such exemptions are taken officially and are recorded with the HR team.

1. Dress Code: Please be reminded that at Jacky's group we always encourage our team to be presentable as part of corporate culture and behaviour. Therefore, our office dress code was set to be formals(Pant, Shirt and formal shoes) only. The exception is only for team members who are working as Technicians(VMS/ISD/CES)/Merchandisers/Helpers/drivers to wear Jeans as they need to perform duty on sites. The Technical team /Merchandisers/Helpers must always wear Jacky's T-shirts with Jeans and comfortable shoes instead of their own Shirt/T-shirt when on duty in UAE or outside UAE (Technical team) attending service calls. Moreover, the dress code policy is attached for your reference which was also mentioned to everyone at the time of joining and shared on regular basis thereafter except during the Covid in year 2020 and 2021.
- In case of VMS Division, the back-office team is provided with one Jacky's T-shirt to wear only during team events or outings. Please avoid wearing in on regular basis in the office as office team must wear only formals as mentioned above.
- Similarly, the (JER/JRL) outlet teams must be in their approved and provided uniform with their name tag while on duty. The helpers in the warehouses must wear safety shoes and helpers who go out for delivery must wear safety vest as well. If any helper found not adhering to the guidelines, then their manager/supervisor will also be responsible along with the person in question and will shoulder the penalty from government authorities.

The dress code is being reminded as very few office team members fail to follow the office dress code protocols and start to look casual unlike rest of the office team by wearing Jeans/T-shirt. Also, some of the outlet team members forget to use name tag while they are on duty. Grooming/personal hygiene is equally important while you are at work or in your personal life so, please do take care of it.

2. Punctuality: As mentioned earlier several times, all team members are expected to be on time and enjoying maximum buffer of 15 minutes only when it's rarely used in a month. However, the head of departments are allowed to report at office maximum by 9.20am. This has been clarified from management team in previous attached memo; that all team members from all divisions are expected to follow Group policies and no one is above or exempted from this with an excuse of seniority, number of years spent, good performance or being ignorant. The management and colleagues are respectful to each team member, and your good performance is measured and appreciated in form of incentives, benefits etc. Hence, ignorance to company policies will not be tolerated and will not be accepted as an excuse. Moreover, HR department has been advised by management to follow protocols such as salary deduction and disciplinary actions.

If your work demands, you to be late sometimes then such information must be given to your HOD and copy HR Team by email or WhatsApp This has been followed by even senior managers at HOD level and management then we see no reason to excuse other team members. If your work demands, you to be late or to be out of the office on regular basis then proper email approvals to be taken from your HOD with copy to HR team and based on that HR team will take final approval from Management. Once this is secured and recorded then HR team would exempt you for that case-to-case basis, so your other team members don't start comparing or have ill feeling by giving your example. If it's not communicated to HR team or secured management's approval for your case, then unfortunately salary will be affected due to late comings and absenteeism. In addition to this, if any team member reporting to work before the actual work timing and expecting to leave early at the end of the day is not permissible. However, we have few team members who prefers arriving early to their work locations to avoid traffic/parking delays as this assures them that they are not late for any reason which is commendable.

3. Sick leaves: As mentioned earlier and informed during the HR induction as well, once a new employee finishes their probation period – As per the new MOHRE law effective 2nd Feb 2022 (Earlier they had to finish 3 months of continuous service after completion of 6 months' Probation period) then employee gets eligibility of 15 paid sick leaves in a year provided they submit DHA/MOH approved sick note certificate even if the sickness is for a day. The same type of certificate is available now in Abu Dhabi and Sharjah. Only Helpers category is exempted from this Sick note certificate, and we would accept normal clinic attendance certificate /prescription paper due to their low salary bracket on humanitarian basis. If you inform of being sick and resume in second half, then either you apply half day AL or take full day sick leave as requesting HR to consider that would be unfair as we can't micromanage and verify if half day was worked or not. Moreover, these leaves are not carried forward by UAE law and company policy which is in place since very beginning and again being ignorant will not grant you an exemption and we recommend you to save these policies to avoid missing it later.
4. Leave/Absenteeism: If you would like to take a short leave then please request on HROPAL or inform your HOD and copy HR team in advance so we are aware of your absence on that day. If it's not applied /requested in advance, then your leave will be considered as absent and can't be adjusted towards your annual leave balance.
5. Work From Home: This concept received popularity since Covid19 came to our lives and we tried our best to safeguard our teams by implementing initially 30%, 50% and work from home option from time to time. Most of our team members continued working with full sincerity however, we were not satisfied with few team member's productivity during this time. Hence, Work from home is not an available option for our team members to use as per their discretion. If work from home is required, then your HOD needs to request HR and so we can secure management's approval on case-to-case basis before resuming Work from home. If you decide to work from home without following the proper channel, then the day will be considered as absent.

6. Annual Leave: As explained in the interview and also at the time of joining and induction, employee is entitled to annual leave once they complete 12 months on the job and approving leaves is solely right of an employer as per UAE laws. Emergency leaves are approved on case-to-case basis depending on the seriousness of the situation such as demise of an immediate family member or severe sickness. Applying emergency leave for reasons such as wedding, birthday etc. are not approved under “Emergency Leave”.
7. Lunch Break: We have 30 minutes lunch break for office team between 1 to 2pm as per the availability of the pantry. However, if you are occupied in work and can't have lunch during the designated time then it's exempted but please make sure it's not done in a group. Moreover, we need to be considerate as some team members have a break during morning hours as well to have their breakfast and smoke breaks during the day, which is actually not permitted but on humanitarian grounds, we choose to be quiet about it, but same understanding is required from these team members, so they don't waste extra time after lunch just to complete their 30 minutes break. In addition to this, please note not taking lunch break in office or outlet/warehouse doesn't give you eligibility to leave work early as it's not compensated against your lunch breaks. The lunch break is one hour between 1 to 2pm for the team at outlets/warehouses and office team who are working six days a week. Currently, we encounter some employees eating meals twice or thrice during the working day on regular basis and some have lunch in the evening and spend more than the allowed time for the same while using mobile phone or watching videos.

Moreover, Kindly note eating at your desk is not permitted in the offices wherever pantry rooms are available such as (Ctrl-I J, NDO & Jebel Ali). This is mainly due to the food odour to the following colleagues, and we must remain respectful towards our colleagues around. It also increases pest activity in the office premises due to dropped food particles.

8. Business Travel: If you intend to travel for work then please make sure that it's requested to HR team at least 1 week prior to your travel to make necessary arrangements as mentioned in the business travel policy unless it's an urgent request due to work requirement. Informing HR team late or one day prior or during last few hours on Friday really puts burden on HR team and increases travel costs too which is a direct loss to your department and company. This needs to be applied on HROPAL under “business leave” before your travel.

Moreover, once you return from business travel you need submit your travel report to your HOD and HR which will be later shared with management as well.

However, Covid also taught us to work in extreme conditions and with that expectation also changed as an employee and an employer. Therefore, answering few calls or emails while you are on leave doesn't qualify you to claim work from home as it has become part of our duty and reflects our responsibility and sincerity towards our work, clients, colleagues, and management.

Lastly, the HR team is fully committed to provide support based on love and understanding at all times towards our Jacky's team, but our job will be easier if same has been reciprocated to us as we are one team supporting each other in different aspects of Jacky's family and not intending or targeting any one individual or division.

Counting on your understanding, support and cooperation. Kindly save this for your future reference as well. If you wish to clarify anything further, then please do let me know.
